What was accomplished last week:

Last week we made a few changes to our figma and now have a more proper color theme. (chose to ignore other themes like dark mode for the most part as they aren't that high of a priority). Besides that we finally knocked out the theming set up in our repository by actually defining the fonts and colors and logo images in there that everything will reference.

Plans for coming week:

We've technically already made one but we want to consider a bit more granularly about what will be completed development wise in the upcoming spring semester. We have a bunch of our front end work broken down into modules/widgets/pages that'll get created but it would be nice to really clarify an order of priority for our features just so we can keep focus on what's really important (a functional app) and less on 'nice to haves' like multiple theme support, push notifications, integrations with canvas, and etc.

Issues or concerns:
